

ASPI Blog ('The Strategist') Policy

Submissions Policy

ASPI Blog welcomes submissions of approximately 400 . 600 words of considered analysis, images, statistics and graphs related to defence and strategic policy.

ASPI will accept, for consideration only, longer pieces but may, in consultation with the author, publish them serially or in part. However, since ASPI has many avenues for publishing longer more complex pieces, the aim of material written for the blog should be to present one or two pertinent observations, facts or opinions, with enough context to make them relevant to a wider policy discussion.

All material submitted to the ASPI Blog should be original, and the author(s) agree to transfer the intellectual property rights to ASPI for the article in question.

ASPI places no restriction on your right to produce and publish material on similar topics to that of the article submitted to the ASPI Blog ("the Submitted Work"). However, by submitting the Submitted Work for consideration with ASPI you agree not to submit for publication any material with substantially similar content as the Submitted Work for a period of three months from the date the Submitted Work is published on the ASPI blog, unless you first obtain the written consent of ASPI.

In some instances ASPI may publish the Submitted Work elsewhere, but will do so with full attribution of the author(s) and noting the ASPI Blog as the original source.

In addition, you agree, in respect of any part of the Submitted Work in which you do not own copyright, to reasonably assist ASPI to obtain permission from the owner of the copyright to use that part of the Submitted Work.

Authors must disclose any commercial relationships, affiliations or conflicts of interest.

Editorial policy

The editors of the ASPI Blog reserve the right to edit the Submitted Work.

In the event that any Submitted Work is edited for reasons of style or brevity or other reason, the author(s) will be provided with the edited form for comment or further discussion at which stage the author can opt to withdraw the article.

The editors of the ASPI Blog will reject any Submitted Work that:

1. does not further the discussion of defence and strategic policy;
2. is in poor taste;
3. which contravenes Australian defamation or vilification laws; or
4. in the judgement of the editorial staff of the ASPI Blog, for any other reason if the content is deemed inappropriate for publishing.

Anonymity

As a general rule, and consistent with ASPI's policies for other publications, ASPI's Blog will not accept submissions from authors who wish to remain anonymous.

In exceptional circumstances ASPI will waive this constraint, provided that the reasons for anonymity are sound and the analysis is deemed a worthy contribution to thinking and discussion within ASPI's scope.

Comments Policy

ASPI Blog encourages responses to posts, either in the form of short remarks, or in the form of additional blog posts of our standard length, (either form being the "Response") which will be subject to the same conditions for submissions as outlined above.

Readers will not be able to post their Responses directly on the ASPI Blog. All comments will be directed to the editors, and will be considered for publication subject to the same editorial quality control mechanisms as the longer posts.

If the editors of the ASPI Blog edit the Responses, wherever possible, the author(s) of the Response will be provided with the edited form in advance of publication. Please note that the turn-around time may be less than twenty-four hours.

Readers must disclose any commercial relationships, affiliations or conflicts of interest.

User Warranties

Authors warrant that any and all submissions (whether in the form of Submitted Works or Responses) have been prepared with due care and diligence.

Authors agree to indemnify and hold ASPI harmless against any and all liability, loss claim, judgment or damage. This indemnity includes, but is not limited to an indemnity against all actions, claims and demands (including the cost of defending or settling any actions, claim or demand) which may be instituted against us, as well as all expenses, penalties or fines (including those imposed by any regulatory body or under statute).

Cross-post and re-use policy

ASPI's Blog uses a Creative Commons license.

Material published, copied, distributed or transmitted on the ASPI Blog is done so under license from Creative Commons pursuant to the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs 3.0 Unported License.

This licence allows work published on the ASPI Blog to be distributed under different terms and conditions to normal copyright. As such, the terms of this policy apply specifically to the ASPI Blog to the exclusion of ASPI's Copyright Policies which are available here.

This license allows all articles and comments posted on the website to be copied, transmitted or redistributed without any further permission sought providing that:

1. The redistribution is for non-commercial purposes;
2. The original author of the work is credited;
3. ASPI Blog is credited as the original source, and a link is included to the original instance of the work on ASPI Blog; and
4. The work is not altered, only copied or redistributed.

To read the Creative Commons Legal Code for the full terms, click here.

The Creative Commons license only applies to original material posted on the ASPI Blog and does not cover material that the ASPI Blog has cross posted from another source with their permission. For republishing material that the ASPI Blog has cross posted from another source, please contact the original source of the article. All cross posts are indicated as such with a line at the end of the article.

The Creative Commons licence does not allow material to be used for commercial purposes. For use for commercial purposes, please contact the editors of the ASPI Blog at blogeditors@aspi.org.au, +61 2 6270 5100 or Australian Strategic Policy Institute, Level 2 Arts House, 40 Macquarie Street, BARTON ACT 2600.

Content Disclaimer

ASPI is intended to help nourish public debate and understanding. The Government believes that improved public understanding of strategic and defence issues is an important long-term investment in Australia's security. Good policy must be informed by a well-informed public debate, and be supported by a sophisticated public understanding of the choices that need to be made.

However ASPI makes no representation as to the suitability of the information contained on the ASPI Blog, for any purpose. It is provided ~~as is~~ without express or implied warranty. The content of the ASPI Blog is provided for information purposes only to encourage public debate and understanding, and is provided on the understanding that the authors and publishers are not engaged to render professional advice or services. The information is provided on the basis that readers will be responsible for making their own assessment of the content presented.

All reasonable efforts are taken to ensure that the information published on the ASPI Blog is accurate at the time of release on the internet; however changes in circumstances after a document is placed on the internet may impact on the accuracy of the information.

The content on the ASPI Blog is provided on the basis that all persons accessing it undertake the responsibility for assessing the accuracy of its content and that they rely on it entirely as their own risk. In no event shall ASPI be liable (including liability for negligence) for any damages (including without limitations, direct, indirect, punitive, special or consequential) whatsoever arising out of a person's use of, access to or inability to use or access the ASPI Blog or any internet site linked to the ASPI Blog.

Amendment

ASPI reserves the right to amend this policy from time to time in its absolute discretion, by publishing the updated policy on the ASPI website.